

If you are in immediate danger, please call the police on triple zero (000)

The police have power to make an application for an intervention order for your protection. You can discuss how and whether they will do this at your local police station. You may also make an application for an intervention order on your own behalf.

You can apply for a family violence intervention order at the Magistrates' or Children's Court. An application is not an order. You can talk to a registrar about applying for an intervention order. If you fear for your children's safety, you can include them in your application.

Here is some information that may help you fill in the application form.

What is a family member?

A family member or partner includes anyone you have (or have had) a family or intimate personal relationship with, including your partner, ex-partner, children, relatives and may include anyone you treat (or have treated as family).

What is a Family Violence Intervention Order?

A family violence intervention order is a court order to protect you from violence by restricting another person's behaviour towards you.

Every family violence intervention order has rules about how a person may behave toward another person, the affected family member. These rules can be different. For example, an intervention order can include rules that a person is not to contact any of their family at all. Or another person's intervention order might say that they can contact their family but not when they have been drinking alcohol or using certain drugs.

People can apply to the court themselves for an intervention order, through filing this form or completing an online application on the Magistrates' Court website via <https://fvio.mcv.vic.gov.au>. The police can also apply on a person's behalf. A family member, or the police, can also make an application for an intervention order on behalf of children or for other adults, or for a person they are making important decisions for under a power of attorney.

A family violence intervention order is not a criminal order but breaking the conditions of the intervention order is called breaching the order, and this is a criminal offence. Police can charge a person with a crime if they have breached the intervention order.

An example of an intervention order breach is if a person

Party types

Applicant: The person who seeks the intervention order to be made to protect a victim of violence is called the applicant. The applicant could be the Affected Family Member, Police Officer, or other person with a legal authority, guardianship or consent of the Affected Family Member.

Affected Family Member: The person(s) who is or has been affected by family violence. After an order is in place then the Affected Family Member (AFM) may be referred to as the Protected Person.

Police application: When an application is made by police against a Respondent to protect an Affected Family Member. Note: If police have any concerns for an Affected Family Member's safety, they have to seek an intervention order to protect the Affected Family Member.

Respondent: The person who has had an application for an intervention order made against them.

Children: By law, a child is 17 and under. Children are affected by violence not just by witnessing violence or having violence perpetrated against them, but also by the after effects of violence.

Hearing types

Application: An application is not an order. It describes what is alleged to have occurred and why the order is needed to protect the affected family member/s. You can also ask the court to make an order for your protection straight away.

Interim Intervention Order: An interim order is a temporary order made by a magistrate until the court can hear more evidence about your application and decide about the need for a final order.

The order is only effective when it is served on the respondent.

Final Order: A final order is a longer-term order made if a magistrate believes a person needs protection. A final order can be made at any court hearing, as long as the application has been served on the respondent.

Mention Hearing: A court hearing when the magistrate will ask you or your lawyer brief details about your case. The magistrate will also speak with the respondent, the respondent's lawyer, or the police (if they are involved). If your case is not finished (e.g. if there is no agreement for an order, and you want to continue with your application for an order), the magistrate may set a date for another hearing.

Directions Hearing: A hearing may be held to work out if there is any agreement to final order being made and if not, who should give evidence before the court to assist the court to decide whether an order is necessary for future protection.

Contested Hearing: Where the magistrate hears all the evidence and will make a decision about the need for a final order for future protection from the respondent.

Applying for leave: Where the applicant seeks permission to be able to make the

History of Family Violence Incidents

To apply for an intervention order, you need to describe what has happened to you. We understand this may be difficult. Please answer the questions below as well as you can.

It is important you include approximate dates and times with the allegations if you can. Providing a near to, or “on or about” time or date is acceptable if you can’t remember the exact day and times.

You can talk to a registrar before you make your application. They can help you with this part. It is important you try to explain the incidents as best you can. You can also bring to court any copies or screenshots of social media, text messages or emails that support your application.

Associate Applications

NOTE: An associate of an Affected Family Member, or a protected person, is a person who provides the Affected Family Member, or a protected person, with assistance or support.

Is there an associate of the Affected Family Member who seeks to make an application as an additional applicant?

Yes - you will need to complete an additional form (FVIO2) No

NOTE: An associate of a respondent is a person so closely connected with the respondent that the respondent can influence the actions of the person, whether directly or indirectly.

Is there an associate of the respondent against whom the Affected Family Member seeks to make an application as an additional respondent?

Yes - you will need to complete an additional form (FVIO3) No

*Speak to the registrar about associate applications and whether it is safe for the parties.
An associate application is not heard by the court until a final order is made in this application.*

Types of protection on a Family Violence Intervention Order

I want the respondent to be prevented from:

(You may choose as many as you like from the list, but the magistrate may not include all the conditions you choose on the order. If there is something you do not want the respondent to do which is not covered in this list, you should discuss this with the Court Registrar, and note it in the box provided).

- Committing family violence against the protected person(s)

Note: The Family Violence Protection Act 2008 defines family violence as behaviour by a person towards a family member of that person that is physically or sexually abusive, emotionally or psychologically abusive, economically abusive, threatening, coercive, or in any other way controls or dominates a family member and causes that family member to feel fear for the safety or wellbeing of that family member or another person.

- Family Violence includes behaviour that causes a child to hear or witness or otherwise be exposed to the effects of these behaviours
- Intentionally damage any property of the protected person(s) or threaten to do so
- Attempting to locate, follow the protected person(s) or keep him/her/them under surveillance
- Publishing on the internet, by email or other electronic communication any material about the protected person
- Contacting or communicating with the protected person(s), by any means
- Approaching or remaining within _____ metres of a protected person
- Going to or remaining within _____ metres of _____ or any place where a protected person lives, works or attends school/childcare
- Getting another person to do anything the respondent must not do under this order

I would like exceptions included in this order:

- The respondent may
- (a) Do anything that is permitted by a Family Law Act order, a child protection order or a written agreement about child arrangements; or
 - (b) Negotiate child arrangements by letter, email or text message; or
 - (c) Communicate with a protected person through a lawyer or mediator; or
 - (d) Arrange and/or participate in counselling or mediation; or
 - (e) Go to the home of a protected person in the company of a police officer or a person chosen by the applicant, to collect personal property

BUT ONLY if the respondent does not commit family violence while doing so

I want the Court to order:

- The respondent must arrange to return person property belonging to the protected person(s) within two days of the service of the order
- The respondent must arrange to return jointly owned property within two days of the service of the order
- Any firearms authority held by the respondent to be cancelled/The respondent must hand any firearms in his/her possession to police immediately
- Any weapons approval or weapons exemption held by the respondent to be revoked. The respondent must hand any weapons in his/her possession to police

I want the Court to encourage:

- The respondent to contact the Men's Referral Service

Types of protection on a Family Violence Intervention Order

Children's arrangements:

- I would like the Family Law Act order about my children to be revived, varied or suspended
- I do not believe that my safety or the safety of my child/ren will be jeopardised by the child/ren living with, spending time with or communicating with the respondent. I understand that the court will require children's arrangements (including handover arrangements) to be in writing

I believe that it may jeopardise my safety and/or the safety of my child/ren for my child/ren:

- To live with the respondent
- To spend time with the respondent
- To communicate with the respondent

Other conditions on the order that you would like the court to make
